AVIATOR WHO PLANNED TO FLY AROUND WORLD AND HIS MECHANIC KILLED IN FALL

AUSTRALIANS MEET DEATH IN TEST FLIGHT

Accident in England as Capt. Smith Prepares for Trip

LONDON, April 13.—(By the Associated Press.)—Sir Ross Smith, the Australian aviator who with his brother, Sir Keith, had planned to start from England April 20 on a flight around the world, was killed when his plane crashed in a practice flight at Brooklands today.

Captain Bennett, an aviator who was planning to accompany Sir Ross and his brother on their around the world flight, also was killed.

The machine which crashed was the one the brothers intended to use in their flight. Captain Bennett of the Vickers company had previously flown it for a half hour, then handed it over to Captain Smith.

As the machine was approaching the airfield to land it got into a spin, and the crash followed. The accident occurred fifteen minutes after Captain Smith and Lieutenant Bennett began their flight. Sir Keith Smith had intended to make the trial flight with them, but arrived at the airfield too late and was among the crowd that witnessed the tragedy.

The machine had climbed gracefully to a height of more than 3,000 feet when suddenly it lost its dip and it went into a spin. The spectators thought at first that the aviators were attempting a stunt, but it soon became apparent that the plane was out of control.

Sir Ross was killed instantly and Lieutenant Bennett died a few minutes after the crash.

Captain Smith yesterday entertained at the Vickers Works in Weybridge a large party of friends who came to wish him luck on his attempted world flight.

Sir Ross was a pilot remarkable for his skill rather than for the size of the plane. He never took chances beyond the necessary ones. "Safety first," with due regard to the necessities of the moment, was his motto.

Captain Smith saw distinguished service in the world war, first with the Australian flying corps in Egypt and Palestine, and later with the Australian flying corps in Egypt and Palestine. He was one of the first to fly a biplane in England.

The route of the flight around the world which the brothers expected to start from London, New York, and continuing along the New England coast to Newfoundland and the jump across the Atlantic to Ireland.

The aviators expected to cover the 21,000 miles in 240 hours of flying spread over a period of three months. Their machine was of the hydro-aeroplane type, fitted with wheels for alighting on land and propelled by an engine of 450 horse power.
